This function is in regular use by cities across the country, and is a primary function of NextRequest. I would also like to request removing the requirement to include an address to submit a records request. Both changes would significantly lessen the workload for both city employees and journalists throughout the city, and more closely aligning Jackson's request system with the spirit of Mississippi's public records laws. I have further explained this request below. I spoke with the City Clerk (or potentially the Deputy City Clerk, if I am mistaken) about this at the Sept. 28, 2026, Ward 7 event. She told me she often has to repeatedly fill requests for the same information, sometimes within the same week, and we discussed how this NextRequest function could ease her workload by preventing repeated records requests for the same documents. I also spoke with Kevin Parkinson about this following the Farish Street Green grant on October. 6, 2026. They both expressed excitement about its potential to streamline workloads for city employees. Mississippi law requires public entities to provide a list of all public records request information submitted to the city over a certain time period upon request, so this change would also save the city from ever having to put in the work to compile that list by hand. I have provided links to a few examples of other cities, both in the South and elsewhere, which use this function on their public records portals below. Most, if not all, of these cities have removed the address requirement as well. Examples include New Orleans, LA; Miami, FL; Durham, NC; Columbia, MO; Albuquerque, NM; New York, NY; and several cities in California. https://nola.nextrequest.com/requests https://miami.nextrequest.com/requests https://cityofdurhamnc.nextrequest.com/requests https://cityofcolumbiamo.nextrequest.com/requests https://nextrequest.cabq.gov/requests https://a860-openrecords.nyc.gov/request/view_all https://cityofberkeleyca.nextrequest.com/requests https://sanfrancisco.nextrequest.com/requests https://lacity.nextrequest.com/requests https://oaklandca.nextrequest.com/requests I am submitting this request both in my function as a Mississippi Free Press reporter and in my capacity as a Society of Professional Journalists member. I would be more than happy to help connect the city with help in completing this request, if NextRequest customer service is not helpful.	10/06/2026 11:21:26 AM		Grace Marion
